9/ The video I posted initially sharing what happened was filmed as I tried to avoid police in this vestibule.

My colleague, @ChaoStrib, and I were driving near Lake Street and mistakenly turned down a street that was blocked off at the end. Before we had a chance to reverse, the Guard/ State Patrol fired #rubber bullets at our car without warning.

It isn't horrible but I am shook up. The window completely shattered and smoke filled the car.

Just deleted tweet about my car being hit with "live rounds." Don't want folks using it to push misinfo. Brain was foggy as I tweeted, meant to say it was a marker round. Regardless, the window completely shattered inward. Left me with cut on left brow and cuts on arm.

To clarify for some folks: My car was fired at on two separate occasions last night. The first instance, mentioned below, happened right before I dropped @ChaoStrib off at his car. The second while I was driving alone, when the window shattered and shards of glass cut me.

I'm sorry, what does this mean?

Are they shooting paint at peaceful protestors so they can find them after they're dispersed? They're not marking rounds (discharged bullets) from a police shooting I haven't yet heard about (but could totally have happened) with a big blotch?

Yep that is exactly what a marking round is
